

Untitled Document

“If only these walls could talk.” How often have you heard people say that? The thing is – they do. And y

Okay, I’m not trying to weird you out. I’m trying to put into words what most people know at a gut le

Anyone who has ever gone house hunting will know that there are houses that say ‘yes’ to you and

We live in a 1905 house with a very special personality. I fell in love with it the second the estate a

I was home. In a sense that I’ve never previously been home. Of course I’ve had bonds with house

And then, when my parents finally moved more than thirty years later, I kept wondering whether a

I’ve called many places home since leaving the house I grew up in. And I’ve left all of them, some

Teri says that when the time comes to break up with a house, we can feel it. “Things become unco

Choosing a house, “like all potential relationships, there’s no guarantee how things will go. Some l

She says that when we stay long enough in one place it is noticeable that our homes start to look a

Really, girlfriend, if you want to discover your unconscious dreams, values or fears, take a look ar

In his book, 'Snoop', psychologist Sam Gosling explains how we showcase our personalities in un-

"Essentially, what your home does is distil a very long history of behaviours and choices," Sam writes.

He explains that if you meet someone new, you only have a very short sample of their behaviour. But,

Then, of course, apart from your habits influencing the things in your home, there's also the vice versa

Environmental psychologists say that every object in your home has an influence on you. Carl Jung called

The odd thing is that when you begin to figure out the hidden messages in your home and when you

We need to decipher these messages consciously because we've learned to become deaf to what